

JUDGE CLAYTON.—The Savannah Georgian of the 17th inst says:—"It is due to this gentleman that he should know that his constituents approved of his remarks on the memorial presented to congress from New-York. Every word uttered by him, has been received and approbated by his fellow citizens in terms not to be misunderstood. It is a firm and manly stand, replete with sound argument and correct views. We have not heard one dissenting voice against it, and feel authorised in saying, from what we have seen, and from the sentiments expressed by those who reside in most of the counties of this State, that all unite in supporting him in the stand he has taken. We, for one, say "go on thou faithful servant."
