

CONGRESS.

Saturday being the day for the report of the Bank Committee, before the House adjourned the Chairman of the Committee stated, that the Committee was ready to report, but their documents could not be arranged before next week. Early next week, they would make the report. It is well understood, says a letter writer, that the Committee will report, that the Bank is a source of corruption to the whole body politic, and especially to printers, editors, lawyers, and Congressmen. We have not heard whether the minority will make a counter report.
