

A Georgia paper states, that when the protesting delegates were leaving the hall of the Anti-Tariff Convention, Judge Clayton asked tauntingly of Mr. Forsyth, if he was afraid of the people? "Yes," said Mr. F., "I am afraid of the people. I am afraid to usurp their authority, and particularly when they have sent me here to consider the best means of opposing the usurpation of others."

This answer should be remembered by the fifteen suspected electors of this State.
