

Judge Clayton, of Georgia, who was the idol of Jacksonism, having refused to go for Van Buren, has been "bribed by the United States Bank." So says the Albany Argus!—Yes, the man whom the Argus lauded to the skies, last winter, for his patriotism and firmness, in destroying the United States Bank, is now charged, by the same Argus, with being "bribed" by the same United States Bank! And upon what ground is this charge made? Not that Mr. Clayton has changed his opinions or his course in relation to the Bank. The Bank could have no motive in "bribing" Mr. Clayton, but to obtain his vote for a renewal of its charter. This is not pretended to be the case. But Mr. Clayton does not support Van Buren; and hence the charge of being "bribed by the United States Bank." The readers of the Argus must have strong stomachs to digest such stuff!
