

We are not a little surprised at being informed that we are supposed to have endorsed the representations of a Georgia editor personally reflecting on Judge CLAYTON, of Georgia, contained in an extract published in our columns purely on the principle of impartiality between two political combatants. This is a strange conception, truly. We endorse no one's personalities, neither the Judge's against the Editor, nor the Editor's against the Judge. Let every tub stand on its own bottom, and every man answer for his own expressions.
