

After extolling in strains of rapture the blessed democratic tendencies of caucusses, particularly of the one which recently nominated the Judge of the Western Circuit for a seat in Congress, the Augusta Constitutionalist says of the Clayton, "a man more good and true, more loyal to his party in its hours of dismay and danger, could not have been selected in all Georgia."—We are at present willing that his address should not be scrutinized; but regret sincerely that the Constitutionalist does not explicitly testify his loyalty to his party, by detailing facts.
His refusing to vote for the re-election of Gilmer is an incontestible instance of his loyalty!—and beseeching Judge Schley to offer for Congress, and tendering and pledging him his support, form another indubitable example of his loyalty to his party in the hour of dismay and danger. His consenting to be run by the party, that disgraced him, in opposition to the very man whom he had entreated to offer and pledged his honor to support, is also a powerful elucidation of his truth, disinterestedness, and magnanimity! What a paragon of fidelity and truth!
