

We have published copiously in our paper during the last eight months on the Indian question, and it may be that to many of our readers the subject is becoming stale and tiresome. Our apology is, the vital importance of the question to the state. We copy another document relating to the same subject, from the letter of General Eaton, the Secretary at War. This letter gives such a plain and clear view of the intentions of the general Government in relation to this matter, as to render it worthy of the attentive perusal of our readers. Without any design at idle bravado, we can corroborate the testimony of Col. McKenney, "that Georgia will not surrender her rights as a state, without making a manly and patriotic effort to defend them," whatever may be the decree of the Supreme Court. Upon this subject the minds of the people are made up almost to a man. There could hardly be found a hundred men in Georgia who would not "stand to their arms;" and dear as is the Union to them, risk its severance rather than submit to the encroachments of the Supreme Court, should any be attempted. On this subject Georgia has suffered with a patient endurance, until the stock of her humility is exhausted. She now stands upon her rights, despite the decrees of Courts, the clamor of demagogues, or the philanthropy of sickly sentimentalists. She demands justice, and will have it.

Letter from the Hon. J. H. Eaton, Secretary at War.
