

A Mistake.—The Philadelphia Inquirer, in making some remarks upon the subject of the late investigation into the affairs of the bank of the U. States, says, "Mr. Thomas is understood to be a mere automaton, who will sign any thing, so that there are but two of the committee acting for themselves, or having any weight of character, willing to continue their quixotic warfare against the bank." We can assure the Editors of the Inquirer that they were never more mistaken, if they suppose Mr. Thomas to be a man of the character they represent; and we can tell them that such representations will do neither them nor the bank any good. Mr. Thomas is a man who is not only competent to form opinions for himself, but to support them with a zeal and ability which will teach those who may or undertake to undervalue his talents, that he is neither to be laughed at or ridiculed. If they wish to serve the bank, we would advise them to choose better weapons for its defence, than those they have employed in this instance.
