A Literary Problem'-Judge Clayton of Georgia,

 has published a candid and able Review of Mr. McDuffie's Report on the Bank of the U. States,-The Reviawer has followed it up with a Card, stating his reception of "an anonymors letter from one of our Cornmercial Cities, informing (him,) among other things, that searcely a particle of the Report on the Bank of the United States, was penned by Mr. McDufie, but penned by those immediatety interested in, or employed by, the Bank;' and that, 'the following individuals can tell who penned that document: Langdon Cheves, N. Biddle, Mr. Ingersoll, \&cc. \&c."' The Judge declares, that he knows and believes nothing about the matter; but if it be trué, it "speaks volumes"-that the "honorable Chairman of the committee (Mr. McD.) should promptly disabuse the public mind as to the alarming suspicions which su h a circumstance is calculated to inspire"-and that "for the sake of the purity of their deliberations, Congress ought to enquire into it, if there is the slightest foundation for such a belief. This mnch (says Judge C.) $w \cdot$ do know: one hundred thousand copies of the Bank Report have been published at the expense of the Bank; it has been republished in all the papers in the U. S. friendly to that institution," \&c. \&c. If the hand of the Bank be not in this thing, there are at least strong marks of it in certain newspaper articles,
