

has been a most singular manœuvre in party tics, first the dismissal of judge Clayton from Bench in disgrace, and then the effort to rally same party round the same individual, with marks of public odium recent upon him, as candidate to represent the people of Georgia Congress. This is a most singular proceeding.
Judge Clayton was unworthy a seat on the bench, he is not equally unworthy a seat in congress! And if the principles which he sustains, dangerous as a judge, are they not equally so as a member of congress? Personally, we have nothing of ill will against Mr. Clayton; he is a man of talents, and merely as such we would ought to yield him the meed of praise. But submitting as he has quietly done to be disgraced by his own party, can he reasonably count on the support of any other.—Columbus Democrat.
