

Mr. Clayton, on the part of the select committee on the affairs of the Bank, presented a report on that subject, and moved that it be referred to a committee of the whole on the state of the Union, and printed. A discussion took place on the subject of the report. Mr. McDuffie addressed the House in explanation of some of the points contained in it which are stated to bear unfavorably towards that institution. Mr. Clayton replied, and argued that the investigation had demonstrated that the affairs of the Bank had been properly conducted, and that its operations were of a dangerous tendency. Mr. Adams disclaimed a concurrence in the sentiments expressed in the report, and animadverted on the course pursued by a majority of the committee in making the inquiry. Mr. Camberleng followed, and vindicated the conduct of the committee, stating that that part of it which Mr. Adams thought most objectionable, had been adopted with the full concurrence of the President of the Bank himself. The debate was further continued by Mr. Wayne, (who made an unavailing motion to postpone the subject to Monday next,) by Messrs. Wickliffe, Thomas, of Maryland, and Johnson, of Kentucky. The report was ultimately referred to a committee of the whole on the state of the Union, and ordered to be printed. The House then adjourned.—Telegraph.

out by the Senate. The Senate then approved the report.

In the House of Representatives, on motion of Mr. Clayton, the documents accompanying the report on the administration of the Bank of the U. S. were ordered to be printed. The amendments to the bill were ordered to be printed.
